This is a three story cottage, which folded up under the great weight of the tower like a match box.

L. H. Burnham built the tower 30 years ago. He intended charging admission and making it a paying in-mission and making it a paying investment. For about a year the tower turned in a profit to its owner. Then people failed to be attracted by the views to be taken in from the height of the tower and the patronage fell off until the tower became known as Burnham's Folly.
